Call for Paper Abstracts

Area Studies in a Globalising World: Challenges and Forms from the 15th to the 21st Century

Papers should delineate forms and challenges of globalisation from the 15th to the 21st century in fields such as migration, media, ethnicity, changing and multiple identities, commerce and economy, everyday life, lifestyle, youth culture, cultural transfer, transnational movements and phenomena, knowledge production and distribution, and internet revolution.

Contributors

All applicants within the scope of the above-mentioned aims and related to the topic of the present call are welcome. SEEMES, however, aims to encourage contributors in particular who have recently finished their PhDs in a language that does not enjoy world-wide attention. They should be prepared to condense their theses to 35-40 pages in order to gain international recognition. They should be ready to provide the editorial board with an English translation that only needs final proofreading.

- Deadline for submission is August 31st, 2010.
- Application requirements: abstract (max. 500 words), 5 keywords, short scientific CV and list of publications (if available)
- Language of applications and contributions: English
